

Nick Mahony

Area Care Manager - South West

Hello, my name is Nick Mahony,
Area Care Manager in the South West.

About me

My main responsibilities in this role include overseeing numerous branch managers in the south west area, ensuring that I support them in delivering all aspects of exceptional care.

In order to do this, we have the very best carers and support teams there are, so that they can thrive to do what they do best: care.

I have moved around the country with my job, but have spent most of my time in Somerset, Devon and Dorset, so I have really good knowledge of the south west region.

In my free time I enjoy holidays with my family and we love exploring and walking in the countryside near where we live.

My experience and expertise

I have spent the majority of my career in the healthcare industry and worked for Boots for over 29 years. My work centered around the pharmacy and medication side of the business, where I led teams of professionals delivering great care and safe provision of medicines to patients, as well as managing the commercial success of retail stores.

I have led people now for 30 years and I really enjoy helping people be the best versions of themselves. I am passionate about training and development.

I have spent a number of years with the support of other family members caring for my mum and dad, looking after them safely at home, so I know first hand how rewarding and challenging it can be at times for our carers, customers and their family alike.

Why I chose Helping Hands

The main reason for beginning my new journey with Helping Hands was for its amazing family values and the company's dedication to delivering individual support to customers in their own homes.

The support I have had from my colleagues since joining in November 2020 has been wonderful. I am working with a superbly caring team who really get people, and that's just great. Everyone I have met loves working here, and thrives on caring the best way they can, everyday.

This is an remarkable company with great values and ambition; it's exciting and a privilege to work here.
